A raid by a German battle cruiser squadron on the east coast of England in which the raiders escaped after having bombarded Lowestoft and hit two British cruisers and a destroyer, is an outstanding feature of the war. The German battle cruiser squadron made its attack on Lowestoft, opening fire on the coast and killing two men, one woman and a child. British light cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers chased the raiders which put back hastily toward Germany. Two British cruisers and a destroyer were hit by German shells but none was sunk. Whether the Germans suffered any damage is not known. Except in Lowestoft there has been a notable absence of infantry fighting on the western front. The big guns, however, have continued the rain of shells on opposing positions at various points. At La Chapelle in Lorraine the Germans launched a heavy infantry attack against the French but were repulsed. Some of the Germans obtained a footing in a portion of the General Scott will be attended at the conference by Major General Johnston, commanding the southern department and in direct charge of the border situation and the pursuit of Villa. It is understood that General Obregon will bring with him several Carranza generals personally familiar with the situation in Northern Mexico and with whom he has been taken by their forces to capture Villa. There were no developments here today, either in the military or diplomatic aspects of the Mexican situation. Advice both to the state and war departments were meagre. He also sent routine messages as to supplies.

BRITISH ANSWER ON NEUTRAL TRADE

Latest Reply to American Protests Against Allied Interference With Commerce

CLAIM IT IS "JURIDICALLY SOUND AND VALID"

Declares Policy is Based Upon "Admitted Principles of International Law Carefully Adjusted to Altered Conditions of Modern Warfare"—Cites the Unprovoked Invasion of Belgium by the Enemy as the First Disregard of Neutral Rights, Which Has Since Been Extended to Naval Warfare by the Wanton Destruction of Neutral Merchant Ships on the High Seas, Regardless of the Lives of Those Aboard—Would Welcome Any Combination of Neutral Nations Which Would Exercise an Effective Influence to Prevent the Violation of Neutral Rights.

Washington, April 25.—The latest British note in answer to American protests against allied interference with neutral trade, made public tonight by the state department, contends that the practice complained of is "juridically sound and valid" and that the relief which neutrals seek is to be obtained by the mitigation of necessary hardships than by "arbitrary changes either in the theory or application of public law upon admitted principles of international law carefully adjusted to the altered conditions of modern warfare."

To Minimize Burden of Neutrals. It discloses that "an impartial and influential commission on that basis pointed to find ways to minimize delay and pledges the allies to make their restrictions of trade and traffic burdensome to neutrals as possible."

Necessity of Regulating Commerce. The note, in which the French government concurs, reiterates the military necessity of regulating commerce of neutrals contiguous to Germany and justifies the effectiveness of the blockade which was challenged by the last American note.

More diplomatic correspondence over the issue is expected to follow. The unanimity of sentiment among the world's neutrals in regard to the rights of trade alone. It says in conclusion:

His Majesty's government have noted with sincere satisfaction the intimation contained in the concluding passages of the United States note, of Washington, D. C., April 22, 1916, that the task of championing the integrity of neutral rights.

Invasion of Belgium First Violation of Neutral Rights. "The first act of this war was the unprovoked invasion by the enemy of neutral territory—that of Belgium—which he was solely pledged by treaty to protect. The invasion of Belgium has since been extended to naval warfare by the wanton destruction of neutral merchant ships on the high seas regardless of the lives of those on board."

His Majesty's government would welcome any combination for the protection of these rights which takes an impartial and comprehensive view of the conduct of this war and judges it by a standard of justice and humanity. The generally accepted provisions of international law and by the rules of humanity. The generally accepted provisions of international law and by the rules of humanity.

At the outset the note suggests that the American complaint is not so much of a violation of neutral rights as it is of a violation of the principles of international law.
